CEPHALOPODS MARKET REPORT

Relief for Falklands/Malvinas at good squid season

Octopus supply was somewhat down in the first half of 2011, especially from Morocco, with prices rising on shorter supply. Squid is faring better this year, with relatively good catches off South America, while cuttlefish remains stable.

Lack of supplies pushes octopus prices up

Since the Spanish octopus season opened again in July, landings have been disappointing. Galician landings fell by over 40% compared with the same period in 2010. Consequently, prices are higher. Average prices in Galicia were up by as much as 50%, and are predicted to go even higher.

However, this development has not yet been reflected in the import statistics. Imports during the first half of the year were in fact somewhat lower than in 2010.

On other markets, trade was also down during the first six months of the year. Japan's imports of octopus during this period were down by 14% compared with the same period in 2010. However, there were some important changes in the major suppliers' market shares. Mauritania is shipping more octopus to Japan this year, while Moroccan exports to Japan are down sharply.

On the Italian market, supplies from imports were stable during the first half of the year at just over 22 000 tonnes. But again, Morocco experienced a drop in shipments by over 50% compared with last year, while Tunisia, Mexico and some other countries have been exporting larger quantities to Italy in 2011.

Octopus prices are up and this has finally become visible also for octopus wholesale prices in Japan, which have fluctuated between USD 12 and USD 14 per kg for larger sizes and between USD 9 and USD 11 for smaller sizes. On the European market, some price increases are expected, as prices have been relatively low for some time, although for some sizes there have been price increases in recent months.

The diminishing supplies of wild-caught octopus have once again revived interest in octopus farming. In Mexico, raising octopus in captivity using a new method has been revealed by the Ministry of Agriculture and Livestock. It is hoped that this new technology will be able to produce large amounts of octopus of the right market size in the future.

Squid

On the squid market, the supply situation is somewhat brighter. The Argentinean fishery of illex got off to a good start during the first six months of 2011 but disappointing landings from August onwards saw final catches 15% below the 2010 season, or 71 600 tonnes for 2011.

This improved supply situation during the first half year was to some extent reflected in imports. Japan imported almost 23% more squid during the first half of 2011 than in the same period in 2010. However, it should be noted that most of the increase in imports came from China, which increased its shipments of squid to Japan by 23.5%. Peru also increased its squid exports to Japan during this period.

Spanish imports also increased but only slightly. 2011 imports were up by only 1.4%, while Italian imports increased by 8%, to 56 700 tonnes. US imports were slightly down, as US domestic supplies are quite good and the need for imports has declined a little. The main supplier to the USA is still China, by a wide margin.

The good fishing season in South America (Falkland Islands/Malvinas and Argentina) is reflected in strong export figures during the first half of 2011. Falkland Is/ Malvinas' exports to Spain were slightly down, though, but Argentinean exports to Spain bounced back after a total absence last year.

Cuttlefish

Cuttlefish supplies appear to be adequate for market demand at the moment. India reports close to a 20% growth in cuttlefish exports and higher prices. At the same time, Chile has announced plans to start cuttlefish processing at a new processing plant in Coronel. The plant will produce both cuttlefish and giant squid products, aiming for the USA and EU markets.

Japan's imports of cuttlefish have, however, dropped in 2011. During the first half of the year, imports declined by 22.5%.

Prices of cuttlefish have been steadily rising since the beginning of 2007, and there is no sign that they will fall in the immediate future. One of the reasons for the high cuttlefish prices is that cold storage holdings have been very low for some time now. Squid prices, in contrast, seem to have stabilized at a lower level, although there are of course some fluctuations.

Italian cuttlefish imports, which have been fairly stable at around 25 000 tonnes a year, were up slightly in the first half of 2011. Imports into Spain are expected to be relatively stable, too, at just under 50 000 tonnes for the full year. Prices on this market are somewhat higher than last year.

Outlook

Several closed seasons are currently in force. Argentina closed its squid fishery at the end of August and the South African squid fishery has an annual closure for a month during October - November. In Peru, the octopus fishery is closed for three months from mid October and marketing and processing is also banned. India's exports of frozen squid and fresh cuttlefish provided good dollar returns in the 2010-11 financial year and predictions are that squid landings are expected to increase in the 2011-12 season.
