EDUCATION

The purpose of the guide is to provide guidance on designing and developing e-learning-based solutions for trainers and instructional designers who are new to e-learning design. The guide also provides basic concepts and information on the processes and resources involved in e-learning development, which may be of interest to human resource and capacity-development managers.

The content of the guide is based on consolidated instructional design models and learning theories and incorporates more than 15 years of experience of the FAO elearning Academy, including work practices, standards and quality criteria adopted for the delivery of learning programmes and self-paced e-learning courses in development contexts.

3.5 hours

Available in English, French, Spanish and Arabic

You will learn about

- What is needed to develop an e-learning project.
- Designing an e-learning project that matches the needs of the learners.
- Creating e-learning materials using different media and instructional techniques.
- Selecting authoring tools and learning platforms.
- Designing and facilitating online collaborative courses.

Who is the course for?

The guide is aimed at trainers, instructional designers, capacity-development professionals and anyone interested in starting an e-learning project, developing e-learning materials, delivering online facilitated courses and e-learning solutions suitable for development contexts.

Key partners

The guide was developed by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) with the support from the European Union (EU) through the Global Network Against Food Crises Partnership Programme. The first edition of this guide was developed in 2011 as part of the FAO Trust Fund Project: "Improving the abilities of Regional Organizations to develop, implement and monitor food security training programmes", funded by the Government of Germany and implemented by FAO.
